

Brill is delighted to republish 'Educating Judges', the seminal monograph in the field of judicial education. First published in 1996, this book enables judicial educators to develop a more effective pedagogy by focuses on the distinctive learning needs, styles and preferences of judges, and deepening understanding of judges as learners. Much has happened since then. Over the past twenty 20 years, judicial education has grown very substantially around the world in both size and sophistication. It is now well established in many countries and is seen as an essential component of modern concepts of justice.

In addition to providing new entrants an opportunity to read this classic text, this second edition provides readers with the opportunity to gauge what has happened – or not – in the world of judicial education over the past two decades. This new edition reports on the findings of the first ever survey conducted of leading judicial educators around the world. In doing so, it examines the state of judicial education across a range of issues, including:

- significant recent developments,
- major institutional issues and challenges,
- trends in professionalizing the practice,
- evolving goals, curricula, methodologies and approaches,
- building knowledge through research, evaluation and networks,
- impact and applications of information technology;
- use of judicial training in official development assistance; and
- how globalisation is affecting the education of judges.
